Love as a way of living

By WILLIAM L. TRIMYER
Love As A Way Of Life
Lesson for May 4, 1980
Scripture Reference: I John 4: 7 to 5:21
Focal Passage: I John 4: 7-21
The Origin Of Love (I John 4: 7-10)

Love did not originate on a horizontal level, that is, love is not the invention of humanity. Love originated from the vertical from God. The author of I John argues that love is an evidence of God likeness.

John wrote in order to refute the gnostics. The gnostics were those whose "Claim to Fame" was their ability to know. In other words, they believed they knew all the important answers to life's toughest questions. But in their knowing they left off the ministry and spirit of love. They were arrogant people who had little or no compassion for others.

The "proof of the pudding is in the bowl!" Those who love and practice compassion in their daily lives have "brushed shoulders" with God, that is, they have experienced the love of God.

How is it that God is love? Again, the proof of that love is revealed in God's supreme action, namely, the revelation and coming of Christ. Christ's own accomplishments of Golgotha and his resurrection reveal God's amazing love for his creatures. If God loves us, it is only natural, after receiving that love, to turn and embrace others with love. We love in response to that love which revealed itself to us in the form of One who "became flesh and lived among us."

The Focus Of Love (I John 4: 11-12)

The astounding thing about God's love is that it is totally unselfish and nonrestricting. God's love embraces all of humanity and not specialized groups. John 3:16 captures the essence and broadness of God's love: "For God so love the World..."

And if God loves us, we will naturally respond by loving others. Such love will be revealed in the way we respond to the plight of humanity. Love that is of God sees the hungry and gives food; it sees the poor and speaks on their behalf; it sees the worried and gives words of comfort and hope.

Love is like wildfire! Love has a way of spreading when it is practiced. Such a simple act as letting another driver into the flow of traffic may cause that person to allow someone else in further down the street.

The example of love in daily practice will move others to become loving in their attitudes and dealings with people. God's love "is perfected in us" when we give of ourselves unselfishly to others in acts of ministry.

We who appreciate the love of God shown towards us are therefore agents of that love. God's children are blessed and are to go about blessing those who are not blessed.

The Experience Of Love (I John 4:13-16)

We may know we are God's children by the fact that his spirit lives in us. God gives to us the gift of his spirit that we may live intimately with him and to share ourselves intimately with others. It is the spirit of God in us that enables us to love actively and unselfishly.

Love can never stand still or remain silent. Love must speak out. The touch of God causes us to share with others our experience with God in Christ. We who enjoy the benefits of our relationship to God are naturally inclined to speak out concerning God's great of humanity.

The nutshell of the gospel is this, "that the Father sent the Son to be the Savior of the world," and when we speak out and act on behalf of this gospel, we reveal our proof of our relationship to God.

The End Results Of Love (I John 4:17-21)

Human love has its warts and blemishes. We cannot love perfectly nor evenly. But our love is "made perfect" by the God who is love. The benefits of love are freedom to love and freedom from fear.

Love enable us to face whatever comes in life. A couple can endure many storms when they are committed to each other out of love.

John's big pitch in this section is aimed at those among the church fellowship who acted hatefully towards their fellow Christians. They claimed to love God, but by their actions they revealed an absence of love. John pointed out the inconsistency of such actions.

There is no way on this earth to declare our friendship with God while we sock it to our neighbor. It is a lie to claim love for God and to practice hatred of our fellow pilgrims. The true test of those who claim to love God is their behavior within their social circles.
